Areas Requiring Special Attention

The Regional Agenda was officially adopted by the Northwest Georgia Regional Commission on January 16, 2014 and there have been no changes to Areas Requiring Special Attention.

Evaluation and Monitoring

1. A description of the evaluation and monitoring activities undertaken by the NWGRC (during the fiscal year just concluded) to measure the effectiveness of the Regional Plan

This section describes the monitoring and evaluation procedures which have been undertaken by the Northwest Georgia Regional Commission to measure the effectiveness of the Regional Plan in meeting the region's goals and objectives. Monitoring and evaluation is an on-going process via the following activities:

- A. Interaction with Local Governments and other Local Agencies. Many of the plan's implementation measures are the responsibility of local governments or other local agencies such as Chambers of Commerce, Development Authorities, Water and Sewer Authorities, and other entities. The Regional Commission provides technical assistance to local agencies in the areas of project development, grant-in-aid application, local comprehensive plan updates, zoning and other development regulation administration, and other programs. Through this interaction, the Regional Commission is kept informed on local activities and can determine if the plan's policies and objectives are being met.

- B. Interaction with Regional Advisory Committees. Northwest Georgia Regional Commission will provide copies of the annual Regional Agenda Update to its Advisory Committee members and asks for their input relative to accomplishments that have been achieved in the region, and any suggestions regarding revisions that should be made to the Plan.
- C. Interaction with other Regional Entities and Agencies. The Regional Commission interacts with a number of other regional entities such as the Tennessee Valley Authority, Metropolitan Planning Commissions, Southeast Industrial Development Association and similar organizations, which carry out programs in the region. Efforts are made to communicate the goals and objectives of the plan to these organizations and coordinate in the development and delivery of programs of mutual interest.
- D. Review of Local Newspapers, Newsletters, and other Publications. Through review of the newspapers and various publications produced by local, state and regional agencies the Regional Commission can also determine if projects initiated or undertaken by other agencies are consistent with goals, objectives, policies and implementation strategies contained in the plan.
- E. Report of Accomplishments. Preparing the annual report of accomplishments also assists the Regional Commission in determining the effectiveness of the plan. A report that describes substantial achievements would indicate that the plan is realistic and consistent with the expectations and desires of local governments and other agencies. On the other hand, if little accomplishments are reported, it would mean that the effectiveness of the plan is limited and should be evaluated to determine if it is realistic or practical or whether there is some other short coming that prevents its implementation.
- F. Regional Commission Initiatives. The Regional Commission also monitors staff activities and program initiatives for consistency with the Plan's goals and objectives. Staff reports that highlight major regional commission activities are prepared and distributed to the Regional Council. Management and staff meetings are routinely conducted to discuss program activities and their effectiveness in achieving the plan's goals and objectives. When opportunities are available to the Regional Commission to initiate new programs that are consistent with the plan, every effort is made to take advantage of the opportunities.

2. The results of the evaluation and monitoring process, assessing the effectiveness of the Regional Plan identifying any modifications needed to enhance its effectiveness; and a review of the FY 2013 - 2014 Regional Agenda Report of Accomplishments indicates that the majority of the proposed implementation measures consist of on-going annual activities. A review of the report of accomplishments indicates that while a substantial amount of activities have been undertaken or initiated that are consistent with recommended implementation strategies, there are also a number of implementation strategies for which no activities can be reported.

As indicated in the report of accomplishments, the reasons for a lack of implementation activity are generally because there was either a lack of demand or funding for the activity. The most prevailing reason was lack of funding. The Regional Commission relies on traditional sources of funding such as the Appalachian Regional Commission, Economic Development Administration, and Georgia Department of Community Affairs contracts for many of their activities. Unfortunately, these traditional sources rarely increase their amounts, and in some cases (such as Department of Natural Resources' Regional Historic Preservation Planner Program) have been cut back. However, the Georgia Department of Community Affairs increased funding to the Northwest Georgia Regional Commission in FY 2010 due to the merger created by House Bill 1216. The Regional Commission is actively seeking funding for new initiatives indicated in the Regional Agenda and have been successful in recent years with agencies such as the Georgia Environmental Protection Division for the Total Maximum Daily Load Program, Source Water Assessment Program, and Watershed Monitoring Plans. The Regional Commission contracts with the Georgia Department of Transportation for bicycle, pedestrian and transit planning. In 2009 the Regional Commission received funding from the Georgia Department of Community Affairs to implement the Neighborhood Stabilization Program. The Regional Commission administers the Paulding County Neighborhood Stabilization Program. In 2013, the Regional Commission contracted with the Georgia Department of Natural Resources, Environmental Protection Division to provide administrative support to the Coosa-North Georgia Regional Water Planning Council. The Regional Commission also administers the Area Agency on Aging and the Workforce Investment Act Program. In addition, local governments have stepped forward to pay for some services via local contracts with the Regional Commission. There are still several programs or projects indicated in the Regional Agenda, which do not presently have a dedicated or committed funding source. In many cases, these projects or programs a funding source will need to be identified. The responsibility for implementing many of the strategies contained in the Regional Agenda requires a role by many agencies other than local governments or the Regional Commission.

The Regional Plan consisting of the Assessment and Agenda was updated in 2012-2013 to incorporate 2010 U.S. Census and other recent data for the population, economic development and housing sections, as well as other information in other sections that was readily available to the Regional Commission. Regional issues and opportunities in the Regional Agenda, which contained such information likewise, were updated to reflect these changes.

3. A list of any plan amendments required as a result of the evaluation and monitoring findings.

There are no proposed plan amendments.
